PSITTACOSIS INVESTIGATED.

At the request of the attending physician, a suspected case of psittacosis in Los Angeles County was investigated. The patient had acquired three shell parakeets about two years before—one died about a year before, the second bird died about two weeks before the patient's illness and the third about one week later. The diagnosis of the case is still pending. Specimens from the patient were submitted for laboratory examination; the birds were not available for laboratory tests.

A second case in a Los Angeles hospital was investigated. The patient had four shell parakeets purchased in March, 1937. Two had been returned to the dealer because of defects and exchanged for two other birds. These four birds were obtained and also the two "defective" birds returned to the dealer and the six were submitted to the laboratory. The two "defective" birds were proven positive for psittacosis. Specimens from the patient were submitted also but the tests have not been completed. The clinical diagnosis of the case was established as psittacosis, however. An investigation of the dealer's aviary and the breeders of the infected birds is now being made.

Psittacosis Control.

In Southern California, 47 aviaries were inspected and 266 interstate shipments were checked and approved. These shipments involved 2,884 shell parakeets and 289 larger psittacine birds.

The New is the child of the Old.
